Hongkong, November 26th, 1908. institutions have become a recognised power of the ordinary laws; and no attempt whatever is made now-a-days to restrain happens that the Chinese authorities are glad to afford them their support, of course looking to a reasonable quid pro quo for the assistance thus rendered. The troubles which have arisen from arbitrary action of guilds are familiar and have been made the subject of treaty stipulations, but the clauses designed to prevent them have for the most part proved to be of very little service. The same kind of combination exists among the different workmen's Guilds are enforced by means of what we suppose may be called peaceable picketing" with a rigour that might excite the envy of the staunchest trade unionist at home. The results of the system, however, are not very encouraging. It may be safely said that in no place is trade-unionism more rigidly carried out than in China, and in no place is there a larger number of what in any other country would be the "unemployed". The vast number of men in any given centre of the country who are ready to do anything for the means of scraping on from day to day is notorious. They do not, however, pose as unemployed and as mere objects for assistance either by direct charity or, by what is the same thing but slightly disguised, public works set on foot to relieve them. With the elasticity which is one of the Chinaman's characteristics, he manages to live where others would starve; but at who are dependent upon their hands and muscles is a very poor affair, and would never be accepted by the class men who form the unemployed in European countries. The practical lesson which is taught by the working of a trade upion system in China is that while it may keep up wages artificially, its effect is to increase the number of men who are thrown out of regular employment, and, bearing this in mind, it may be much questioned whether the system is in reality so much to the benefit of the working classes as a whole as is generally assumed.

Of the danger of allowing any cliss to hare privileges or powers outside the or-Mnary law of the country, the system in China affords innumerable examples. They do not as a rule come to the notice of Packed in the daintiest boxes or in the Eurpeans but every now and then a case arises which shows the nature of the methods adopted-a man who goes counter to the rules is assaulted, thrown from a verandah to which he has been summoned to discuss the offence laid to his charge, or rather to receive sentence, as very little discussion is allowed in such cases. These amiable methods are apparently now being freely adopted at home, not only against members of trade unious but as a means of inducing men to join such associations. The Specta. tor, which has all along been a strong supporter of the Liberal Government, has never besitated to point out the soricusness of placing trade unions and all their doings drauses with communications addressed to the Editor, practically above the law. That paper gives an account of an accident in the Rhymner Valley where, it states, a campaign has been going to compel nonunionists to enter the Federation methods which it mildly describes as "not far distant from terrorism". These methods were lassoing men and dragging them through the streets, bound with ropes and carried to Union meetings, while some have been dressed up in women's clothes and made a public spectacle. Could anything be pany, Limited, the two Kwengs Trading Commore completely Chinese? Barring the women's clothes (a refinement which the celestials have not yet hit upon) it is precisely the mode in which those in China who venture to go against unions are treated. And this is what is called "peaceful persuasion." But the analogy does not end here. "The worst feature in the case has been " says the Spectator, "that there has been no attempt to curb the disorders on the part of those Apostles of Peace, the Labour Leaders." This is the THE discussions with which the home natural result of placing any class of men papers teem, upon the subject of trade actually above the law; and if things go unions and the extraordinary powers which on as they are, the mischief will not end have been placed in their hands by recent here. Once let a mob get the upper hand levislation, are of special interest to those and the result, as all experience shows, is who have had an opportunity of watching that in the event of any disturbance, the the effects, in China, of the very system sympathy of the masses is with those who which has now obtained a recognised foot. go against law and order in place of being ing in England, and which is causing on the side of those who maintain it, and apprehension in the minds of many well by degrees the spirit of fairplay, which has informed persons. In China, the system of always characterised Englishmen, is certain Guilds, Unions and labour combinations to be undermined if the present state of has existed from time immemorial. Such things is allowed to continue. Mr. KEIR Hardie, who rants about liberty, sees no element in social, commercial and political invasion of the liberty of the non-unionist life. They have long been outside the men who were bound and dragged along the streets. The whole of his sympathies are absorbed in the Chinese on the Rand whose their action. Indeed it often enough contracts contain "servile conditions." It would be difficult for confirmed muddle. headedness to go further. That Trade Unions, if conducted with fairness and moderation, may be not only legitimate but of substantial use both to employer and employed, the paper from which we have quoted fully admits; but so far from its being desirable to give them special powers which place them legally above the Law (if we may be permitted the Irishiam) the

the Chinese labouring classes and indeed object of legislation should be in precisely almost in every direction; and the rules of | the opposite direction, and should aim at restraining the undue exercise of the excess of power they already possess by virtue of combination. What Trade Unions should aim at is to induce men to join them by offering privileges and assistance to those who do so, which they would not accord to any who chose to keep without their pale. John's Ambulance Association. Ladies wishing They have, however, bitherto gone upon the to join the class should soud their names to Dr. brute principle of using force both moral F. Clark, hon. secretary. and physical against those who are not of their number, which is manifestly nothing more nor less than an invasion of individual freedom. That a British House of Commons could be found to give its sanction by a large majority, to such a system, and in fact to strengthen it, is surely one of the most astounding things that has ever been done in the name of Liberty. It is enough to turn Mill in his grave.

"I am not the recipient of any abusive letters," confides Mr. Henniker Heaton, M.P., to a "Cassell's Saturday Journal" interviewer. " Sir William Howard Russell, however, had a rather quaint communication concerning me some time ago. It was contained in a postscript to a note sent to him from a man in Canada. As faras I can remember, it read thus: " You know that Hennik er Heaton. Tell that black guard that he is the curse of my life. All my relatives in County Clare— you know there are a hundred of them-have written to me, taking advantage of the penny post, to ask me for assistance to enable them to come out to Canada."

Sir William Treloar, the Lord Mayor-elect, in opening the show of the London Cage Bird Association, said there was one bird in the exhibition which interested him more than all the others. It was the lizard capary, which were its beautiful plumage for only twelve months of its life. It was, in fact, like the Lord Mayor. He himself kept a good many birds, and one of the most interesting of them was a dial bird, army Las been instrumental in saving 30,000 which came, he believed, from India. A queer explanation of the illness of the Saltan of Turkey is given by the Constantinople correspondent of the Hetit Purisien. who relates that it was caused by a bullet. which struck the Commander of the Faithful in the low r part of the body, his Majesty's assailant being one of his favourites, a Kurdish beauty, who had become jenlous of "a young and adorable Circansian." The Kurdish belle made a snatch at the revolver which the Sultan always carried on him and fired before he could prevent her. Dr. - chrader, who happened to be at Pera, was promptly brought to the Palace, and he extracted the bullet. It had damaged one or two organs, but the operation was borne bravely and without recourse to chloroform. The affair was kept secret, and even when Dr. Bergmann afterwards noticed certain symptoms no explanation of their cause was given to him. Hence the idea that the Sultan, who is now quite well, must be suffering from some very serious disease.

November 7th is given as the date of the Australian's departure from Sydney and she was scheduled to arrive at Manila November 26th. The Australian belongs to the Eastern and Australian Steamship line, and was one of the best liners in the company's service, being over 300 feet long and with a net tennage of 1784. She has a capacity of 4000 tons of cargo and 200 passengers. It is probable that 150 Asiatics and 30 or 40 Europeans were aboard, and the agents believe that she carried a heavy cargo. Captain St. John George, an experienced and able master, commanded the Australian on her last trip to Manila September 2nd, and it is understood that he is with her now. Eight or nine months ago the Australian ran aground in Torres Straits in the near vicinity of Vashon Head while en route to Manila, but was pulled off without damage save the loss of some cargo which was thrown overboard to lighten her burden.

TRAFFIC IN CHILDREN. Another case illustrating the kidnapping business in which not a few Chineso engage with profit to themselves and great misery to their unfortunate victims was heard when a man and a woman from West Point were charged with kidnapping a boy from his uncle at Yaumati on the 4th inst. From the evidence it appeared that four boys in the employ of the defendants-who were known to carry on a large business in selling boys-met Li I Tak, the kidnapped child, at Shek-tong-sui and induced him to accompany them by giving him sweets. On arrival at West Point he was locked up. During his imprisonment several people called with the object of purchasing a boy but they declined to pay 350 for the boy and no business was transacted. The police having learned of the business that was carried on at this house visited it and found this seven year old boy there and succeeded in restoring him to his parents. Defeudants were sentenced to six months 'imprisonment the man to receive an additional six hours in the stocks and to be deported.

SIR FRANK SWETTENHAM ON THE CROWN AGENT SYSTEM

Sir Frank Swettenham's latest book on British Malaya" contains the following as it is in several ways a decided improvement. criticism of the Crown Agent system :- "It appears that Colonies-that is, of course, Crown Colonies, responsible Governments do 'as they please, and do not employ the Crown Agents-are not supposed to possess engineers qualified to construct railways; and, as rule, it may he granted that that is a very proper supposition. Therefore there is an "established system for the construction of Government railways in these places, and that system is, that the Consulting Engineers to the Crown Agents undertake the whole job. They select, survey and set out the line, appoint as many engineers as they think necessary, and send them out to the Company secretary's vaile mecum, and do the construction on salaries fixed by them or the stareholder's advisor. For instance, there in consultation with the Urown Agents. They deside the weight of the rails, the type of the bridges and rolling-stock, purchase the whole of the materials, and when the line is completed, fellow shareholders is open to them during they inform the Government of the Colony for office hours, and that a penalty attaches whom it is made, whose only concern is to pay the bill. The advantage of this system is that the line is made—in time—and neither the Colony's chief engineer, nor its Governor, nor its Executive or Legislative Council, have any real responsibility for the work, even though it takes twice as long to construct as the time originally estimated and costs twice as much. As the Construction Engineer is serving his masters in England and not the Colquial Government, it is difficult to interfere with him; and as the Colony has no concern with the railway till it is finished and handed over, it is no-que's business to criticize. Moreover, if there is no one in the Colony capable of constructing the railway it is difficult to suppose that local criticism can have any value. The objections to this "established system" are. that the work is executed thousands of miles from the people who are responsible for it, who very probably have no personal knowledge of the local circumstances, of the effects of the climate and rainfall, of labour conditions, of local prices, of the usefulness or otherwise of local mat rials under certain conditions common in railway construction, of the resources of the place, and so on. The Engineer in charge of the work is probably equally at sea until he has been many months in the place and bought his experience at the cost of the local Government. Then, as already expl. ined, the local Government counct interfere, cannot be always raising questions only to boasked to give its full reasons in writing, and perhaps, eventually have to explain what title it has to offer an opinion on technical points. However much the time, or the estimated cost, of the work is exceeded, no one is responsible. The Secretary of State, of course, only insists on the system; beyond that he washes his hands of the matter. The Crown Agents have clearly nothing to do with it the whole business only gives them trouble. The Consulting Engineer cannot be beld responsible if there is more rain, or more sun, than they expected at any particular time; nor are they held responsible if their representative in the Colony finds it impossible to get labour, or sleepers, or any other local commodity at the prices named in the estimates. If a bank is washed away bec use the waterways were not large eLough to admit the passage of stormwater, or if a bridge tumbles down because the foundations were not properly constructed, the people in England carnot be match ended by two goals to one in favour of | in charge, the utmost that can be done is to dismiss him, and he is not serving the the Kowlon line. Government, but the Consulting Engineer. Worst of all, the Consulting Engineers, as such, disappear and are replaced by Construction Engineers who pass the work of their own men, or of the Contractors they employ; being placed in the invidious and (to the Government) unsatisfactory position of having to sit in judgment on their own plans and estimates carried out by their own servantsmen who probably have to look to them for future employment. Therefore, whatever, the kind of work put in, the Government has to accept it; whatever the bill, the Government has to pay it; however, the estimated time of construction is exceeded, the public must bear

REVIEWS.

The Whirligig of Time, by BEATRICE WHITEY, London: George Bell and Sons:

be read with appreciation.

This is another of the very few remarkable novels of the year, with distinct features of its own, including originality and wit. The "plot" cannot be summarised without injustice, nor the outline of the story , iven without giving a wrong impression. It is a thoroughly interestling book, and of a most wholesome philosophy. To the problems of married life it brings at once a keen feminine insight and at the same time a virile judgment. The characters are Australians, but the book seems to have universal applications. One passage is especially worth giving as a sample. The writer says, " For be assured, dear reader, that women would never make the fuse and trouble that they do about little things if they had enough big ones to occupy them. Give them a great call-birth, death, illness, widowhood (with a family of orphans to rear and not a penny to start on) and they rise to it almost every time, as men in like circumstances rarely would or could. It is not women's natures that are petty, but their lives—the rubbish that feeds their thoughts—as was dimly apprehended by our poor Paul, rebelling against the tyranny of clothes and furniture the unnecessary grind of the social mill, grinding up nervous and intellectual energies into futile dust and chaff". Many married couples will doubtless ponder the paradox on page 330, which says "the happiness that is happy all

The author presents opposite types of women, and in revealing their characteristics and that of a weak selfish man, she writes an interesting story. The studies are decidedly clever, particularly that of Frederica Isod, a type of advanced woman who marries Mr. Lovell, a man with little thought beyond his own comfort, to put into practice her theories as to the proper relation of man and wife. The other personalities, ordinary people, are no less skilfully drawn. Certainly The Whirligig of Time will the trouble was still continuing. The issue of that date reported: -The whole of the Serangeon district was in a state of lawlessness yesterday, gang robheries and acts of violence took place everywhere and the few police left in charge of that district were powerless to cope with the numerous out-breaks. Their strength had been reduced owing to the town police having to value of 82,000. The three policemen were helpless. They fired three or four shots in the air to frighten the robbers, but the Teochews took no notice The news of this during robbery reached headquarters at about one o'clock and Captain D'Arey Symonds, Chief Police Officer, with Mr. Wylly, Assistant Superintendent of Police, and Inspector Cruminey, went to the scene immediately with a few Europeans. ed "divorce party" held here last night, when Consols are quoted £86-11-16. none but divorced persons were invited, with and she gave the affair in celebration of her recent release from her matrimonial bonds. This lady, we are informed by several leading newspapers to-day, welcomed her guests in her father's house, which was joyously festooned for the eccasion. Radiant and happy, says the reporter, she received under a broken wedding They often exact less respect than so-called kong Steam Waterboats are want dat $7. diplomas issued by certain American schools of learning, which exist only for the benefit of those willing to pay for the privilege of affixing certain letters to their names, Some of the "best-known members of New qualifying" before the courts. One and all, however," entered into the spirit of the occasion. and wished the fair hostess many happy returns." One of the divorcess, says a leading newspaper, whose husband had left her on her wedding-day with nothing but a cheque which caused her that she had never had such a good time since the plaintiff." Supper was served at eleven o'clock, and at the time most American papers were going to press early this morning hostess and guests were still joyously calebrating the evert. Reports of these extraordinary functions appearing in the leading newspapars have their serious as well as their amusing side in the comment one hears in America to-day on every side. Divorces being numerous, and in some States astonishingly easy to procure, there is an increasing tendency, it is represented, to belittle the sanctity of matrimonial bonds. If divorceds and, members of the alimony colony really desire to dine together privately and celebrate their legal victories no freeborn American would wish to interfere with them, but in the interests of the younger generation, whose ideas regarding marriage are not disillusioned, it is urged, the newspaper press should refrair from giving · LARGE AND COMMODIOUS publicity and a humorous turn to their records of affairs such as last night's divoces party.

> MARKET FOR FOOTWEAR AT VLADIVOSTOCK.

> > STYLES AND PRICES.

The American Consul at Vladivostock, in drawing attention to the opportunity which the suspension of import duties there has provided to secure a footbold in the market for footwear, makes note of some of the peculi crities of Asiatio boots and shoes. At present, according to his report, there is little danger of serious competi tion from small shoemakers, who in China and Japan turn out custom made shoes at such low prices, probably because Japanese and Chinese workmen in Visdivostock must be paid two or three times as much wages as at home. In the heavy boots worn by the peasants, labourers, and soldiers probably little can be done, the best chance being for ordinary light boots and shoes of the cheapest as well as the more expensive grades.

Styles for sale may be both French and American, but principally the former. The long narrow too and rather light soles are very popular for the better class of shoes. Live of and congress boots are most used, the latter especially in the cheaper grades. As for leather, calf, box calf, patent leather, and so called " French glace," are most common, both in black and in tan. On account of the cold in winter and the mud and rain during much of the spring and summer, boots or high shoes are much more popular than exfords. Retail prices for the men's boots mostly sold range from 15s, to 28s. per pair, though there are boots of patent leather sold for 36s., but a dealer who wished to put in a line of American shoes told the Cousul be wanted to buy from the factory at prices between 7s. and 16s. This great difference between buying and selling price, while partly due to the local oustom of charging large profits, is also caused by the heavy expenses for rent, freight. insurance, landing charges, etc., to which local merchants are subjected. Retail prices forcexfords are about 4s. less than for boo's. Tou-boots sell at from 24s, to to 44s, per pair. They are much used both by military officers and by persons living in the interior. The ladies' boots mostly sold cost from 8s. to 16s. per pair, though more expensive boots are also sold.

A very large quantity of rubber overshoss and arctics is used, as practically every man, woman, and child who can afford to wear them, ns they are indispensable against the winter cold and the muddy spring. Those now sold at Vladivostockers mostly made at St. Petersburg and at Riga. They are of very thick rubber, especially those for winter use, with a lining of wool or catton. On account of this thickness, the rubbers can be slipped or stamped on without using the hands, not such a trivial consideration when muddy rubbers must continually be taken off or put on. The most common kind is made with a high front that nearly covers the whole of a low shoe. Men's rubbers sell for 6s. or 7s, ladies' for from 4s, to 6s, the retailers making a comparatively small profit on th-m.
